INVESTMENT OBJECTIVES

The Tactical Allocation Model blends in equal parts the AAMA Aggressive Equity Model with the Sierra Tactical Core Income Fund.* The objective is to participate in equity returns while maintaining a component of downside risk protection.

The Aggressive Equity Model employs a multi-step process that combines stocks of any market capitalization using research, valuation, and stock selection. Relative valuation and market environment views are coupled to develop rankings by relative attractiveness and to determine weighting in the portfolio.

The Sierra Tactical Core Income Fund invests in a diverse selection of income-oriented asset classes. A stop is placed under each holding that rises as its price rises. A position is sold when its price declines below its stop, with the goal of limiting drawdowns even during periods of severe market declines.

This combination of aggressive equity and income-oriented asset classes is designed to participate in the most attractive areas of the U.S. stock market while providing some cushion against a severe decline.
